11 lawmen plead not guilty to murder raps

By Marlon Ramos

DRESSING TO BE WEARING THE POLITICAL colors of the season, nine policemen and two militiamen yesterday pleaded not guilty to multiple murder charges in connection with the Nov. 23 slaughter of 57 people in Maguindanao.

Inspectors Rex Ariel Diongon and Michael Joy Macaraig entered their pleas at the trial presided over by Quezon City Judge Jocelyn Solis-Reyes at a temporary courtroom at Camp Bagong Diwa in Bicutan, Taguig City.

ALL IT TOOK WAS A PHONE CALL FOR JAIL officials to allow Datu Unsay Mayor Andal Ampatuan Jr. to hold a news briefing inside a high-security prison compound in Taguig City.

Senior Inspector Lloyd Gonzaga, warden of the Quezon City Jail Annex (QCJA) at Camp Bagong Diwa, said Ampatuan did not file any written request for the press conference on Tuesday at the detention facility.

During the briefing, the primary suspect in the grisly killings in Maguindanao of 57 people, including at least 30 media workers, declared his family's support for Sen. Benigno Aquino III, Liberal Party (LP) standard-bearer.

Wearing a yellow T-shirt and sporting a yellow baller ID, Ampatuan flashed the "L" (Laban) sign of Aquino before media people.

Roxas denies blocking Escudero ad on Binay

ANG LADLAD, WHICH ASPIRES TO BE THE FIRST gay group in Asia to hold a legislative office, yesterday endorsed Liberal Party standard-bearer Sen. Benigno "Noynoy" Aquino III, but not his running mate, Sen. Manuel "Mar" Roxas.

Ladlad is supporting Makati Mayor Jejomar Binay, vice presidential candidate of the Pwersa ng Masang Pilipino (PMP).

The "Noy-Bi" combination is also being pushed by Sen. Francis "Chiz" Escudero, who earlier backed out of the presidential race.

Escudero was instrumental in securing Ang Ladlad's support for Aquino and Binay, according to the group's chair Danton Remoto.

Reached for comment in Cagayan de Oro City, Aquino said this was no time to get jealous especially with interest groups endorsing candidates from different parties, such as the Noy-Bi pairing.

"We have to be more open-minded. This is not the time to harbor ill feelings. We can't afford to be ill-tempered. There is no point to that. We have to be calm especially in the last few days when the nightmare scenarios could happen. We cannot be hardheaded," Aquino said at a press conference.

He said he had assured supporters that Roxas remained his vice presidential candidate. "If I can't convince (a supporter to back up Roxas), I told Mar he should look for others. In the same token, if there is someone who only likes Mar, I have to find others for me," Aquino said.

ACTING JUSTICE SECRETARY Alberto Agra may be taking the heat now, but it is his "Chief" and the latter's close ties to the "conspirators" in the November 2009 massacre of 57 people in Maguindanao that is at the center of the controversy, according to Archbishop Emeritus Oscar Cruz.

In a statement, Cruz, an outspoken critic of President Macapagal-Arroyo's administration, said Agra was just a cog in the wheel. "Whether [Agra] knows and realizes it or not, he might find consolation in the truth that the individual at the very center of the abominable and nauseating case is not really him, one humble clerk, but his Chief, plus the latter's disgusting and deadly political benefactors," Cruz said.

Nicky, Jamby, Dick judged 'greenest' of candidates

FAST FORWARD TO JULY, WHEN A new President shall have been installed. What's on the environmental agenda during his/her first 100 days in office?

Environmental groups Greenpeace Southeast Asia and the Ecowaste Coalition recently organized the 2010 Green Electoral Initiative (GEI) as part of their campaign to push the environment as a mainstream issue in the elections.

In a questionnaire, the 2010 GEI challenged the presidential candidates to present their positions and plans of action on key environmental issues such as climate change and energy, solid waste, water, sustainable agriculture and genetically modified crops, forests, mining, nuclear power and urban environmental challenges (smoke-belchers, huge billboards).

Nicanor Perlas (independent) scored the highest total of points, with Jamby Madrigal (independent) and Richard Gordon (Bagumbayan) trailing behind him with almost equal rankings.

Eddie Villanueva (Bangon Pilipinas), Benigno Aquino III (Liberal Party) and Manuel Villar (Nacionalista Party) and De los Reyes rounded up the green-to-gray ranking system.

An independent panel of evaluators assessed the candidates' responses based on agreed criteria with specific points assigned per question and issue. (For the full results and the candidates' responses, visit www.greenpeace.org.ph/elections.)

Not all the presidential candidates took part in the GEI.

General denies meeting Noynoy

By Jocelyn R. Uy and Jeffrey M. Tupas, Inquirer Mindanao

A MILITARY GENERAL WHO IS RUMORED TO have met with Liberal Party standard-bearer Benigno Aquino III has denied that any meeting took place and reaffirmed his "unconditional support" for the Armed Forces leadership.

In a letter sent to AFP Chief Gen. Delfin Bangit yesterday, Lt. Gen. Raymundo Ferrer, the chief of the Eastern Mindanao Command, denied having met with Aquino or any other candidate, according to military spokesperson Lt. Col. Arnulfo Burgos Jr.

Reading from the letter, Burgos quoted Ferrer as expressing dismay that his name was being dragged into what Burgos called "bad information" to give the impression that there was disunity in the military.

Ferrer's letter was prompted by reports that officers belonging to the Philippine Military Academy Class of 1977 had met with Aquino and discussed the possibility of a failure of elections.

During the meeting, the officers, including Ferrer, allegedly complained to Aquino about the appointment of Bangit to head the AFP.

On Tuesday, Bangit said he had ordered an investigation of the supposed meeting.

Burgos said Ferrer's letter was "confidential" and could not be made available to the media.

The Inquirer, however, obtained a copy of the letter from a source who asked not to be identified.

In the letter, Ferrer said he has never attended any meeting with any politician, especially not with Aquino.

"My loyalty to the AFP under your leadership is greater than my personal feelings. I am not disgruntled or else I would have resigned my position and detested the institution to my heart's content," Ferrer said.

Burgos said the military would not go to the extent of summoning Aquino in its investigation.

"We can only investigate within our ranks," he said. Ferrer will also not be called as his letter was explanation enough.

"It's clear that Gen. Ferrer did not attend the purported meeting and these [reports] are just meant to politicize the military which will never happen because we won't allow ourselves to be bothered by this," said Burgos.

He said Bangit had called the major service commanders and other high-ranking officials to a conference to discuss urgent concerns like the talk of a possible junta should the elections fail.

"During the conference, all the attendees affirmed that there will never be a junta," said Burgos.

Up to 6M votes could be stolen

By Philip C. Tubeza

UP TO SIX MILLION votes could be stolen through "digital dagdag-bawas" (vote padding and shaving) in the May elections because of the Commission on Elections' (Comelec) decision to disable two security features of the Precinct Count Optical Scanner (PCOS) machines, warned Akbayan party-list member Risa Hontiveros, a Liberal Party senatorial candidate.

The two security features that the Comelec "suspiciously and arbitrarily disabled" were the voter verification mechanism and the digital signature requirement in transmitting votes for digital canvassing, according to Hontiveros.

She said the decision to "deliberately" disable the two security features of the PCOS machines was done without any Comelec resolution.

"Poll watchers were just told that for the sake of expediency the Comelec decided to switch off these features," Hontiveros said in a statement.

She warned that without these security features, votes could be manipulated from the 82,000 spare PCOS machines.

"An electoral mafia could steal six million legitimate votes and sell them to the highest bidder. This is the digital version of dagdag-bawas," Hontiveros said.

According to Hontiveros, the voter verification mechanism would have allowed a voter to know if the PCOS machine had read all the correct votes.

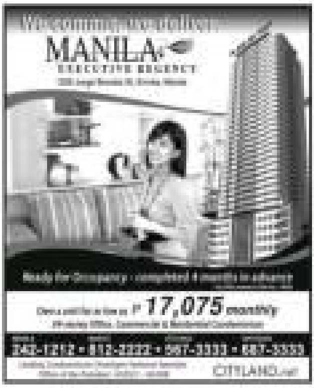

The digital signature of the election officers reasonably accompanies the transmission of votes for canvassing, which would allow the computer tool converting system to verify the authenticity of the votes transmitted.

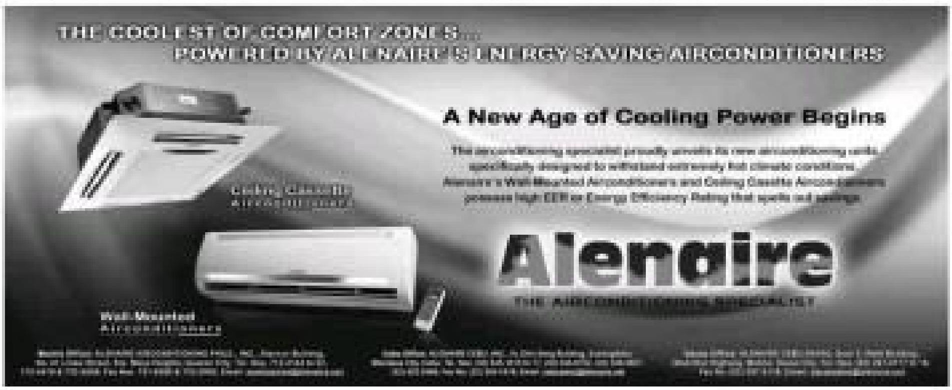

"In short, both features prevent fraud. It baffles me why they were deactivated. What is the Comelec up to? They should be reactivated to ensure digital transparency," Hontiveros said.

"There is still time for Comelec to build our trust with the automation system. The voters are already experiencing 'hakbang' and some are even anticipating a 'failure of elections' scenario," she said. With Alcuaz

SO THE PUBLIC MAY KNOW

To Our Valued Passengers, Shippers and the Public:

The Manila North Harbor, the country's main port serving domestic trade, commerce and passenger travel, was reduced to a picture of chaos and disorder this past week causing inconvenience to passengers and losses to shipping companies and their customers because of delays.

The new port operator, the Manila North Harbour Port Inc., a joint venture of Harbour Centre Port Terminal Inc. and Metro Pacific Investment Corporation, took over the operations of the port from the Philippine Ports Authority on Sunday, 11 April 2010, without prior notice to the port users and without having the readiness needed for efficient continued operations. This is in material breach of the ideal, orderly and moral process in any transition.

How did it get to this point?

- On 19 November 2009, PPA awarded to MNHPI the contract for the development and operation of the Manila North Harbor even if there was only one bidder, contrary to the Instructions to Bidders of the PPA.

- The turnover had been scheduled 3 times (1 January, 15 January and 15 February) and each time was deferred for the same reasons: a) unresolved labor issues; b) MNHPI's non-compliance with the minimum required handling equipment; c) 5% concession fee disputed by port users that MNHPI would be allowed to charge third party service providers at the port - this fee, imposed without any added value, would add cost to the consumers; and, d) other legal grounds mainly, inconsistencies between the Terms of Reference (TOR) and the Contract Award. These issues are still unresolved.

- The members of the Philippine Liners Shipping Association (PLSA) challenged the MNHPI award before the Supreme Court on 8 April seeking for the nullification of the Contract and applying for a Temporary Restraining Order, Status Quo Ante order or any equitable relief. Pending this Supreme Court case, the issue as to whether or not MNHPI could legally take over the operation at North Harbor became sub judice.

- To pre-empt the Supreme Court, MNHPI forced their way into the premises of North Harbor, intimidating the resisting port workers. People were hurt in the process.

- This past week, total disarray characterized the operation at the North Harbor, with long queues, traffic congestion, delayed withdrawal of cargoes, delayed departure of vessels, perishable goods gone to waste and passengers left to wait long hours for boarding. This is all because MNHPI is not ready and does not have a takeover plan, they do not have the needed complement of port workers, and most importantly they do not have the equipment required for efficient operations, in clear violation of the Contract and the TOR.

The PLSA has long awaited a modern and efficient domestic Port of Manila to be able to lower costs and to increase efficiency. But now, a company behaving like a monopoly, has been allowed to take over North Harbor at the expense of our customers, the passengers and cargo owners, and the consuming public.

The immediate intervention by the Government to resolve this urgent matter is called upon to protect public interest.

From page A1

Making the same not guilty pleas were Police Officers 2 Ansabo Guiabar, Saudi Pasutan and Hernanie Decipulo Jr.; Police Officers 1 Pia Kamidon, Rainer Ebus, Hensly Amalia and Esprielito Lejarso; and militiamen Takpan Dilon and Esmael Canapia.

Save for Dilon, who was in police uniform, the accused wore jail uniforms and each had a jail guard beside them. Five of the suspects wore orange T-shirts while the others were in yellow.

"Those five must be supporting Villar and the others are for Noynoy," a court official quipped, apparently referring to the campaign colors of rival presidential candidates Manuel Villar and Benigno Aquino III.

Senior Supt. Lloyd Gonzaga, QCJA warden, said those clad in orange jail uniforms were detained at Camp Crame, while those in yellow were inmates of QCJA.

"There's no politics about it. We have been using yellow T-shirts so we could easily monitor our detainees whenever we bring them outside the prison," Gonzaga explained.

The charges were read by the clerk of court in Filipino before they were translated into the Maguindanaon dialect by an official of the Office of Muslim Affairs.

The arraignment of PO3 Abdulwahid Abdulgani, PO2 Hamad Nasa and Police Officer 1 Esmael Guialal and Michael Madsig was moved to April 30 pending the resolution of their motion to quash.

The 11 were among 197 people charged with the worst violence in the nation's history. They included 29 members of the powerful Ampatuan clan, one of President Macapagal-Arroyo's staunchest political allies.

Six Ampatuan clan members, including the patriarch Andal Ampatuan Sr., had been transferred from detention in Mindanao to prison cells just two floors above the makeshift courtroom at the Quezon City Jail Annex (QCJA).

Almost five months after the massacre, authorities have only arrested 62 of those with warrants of arrest.

Their hands cuffed, the accused were led by jail guards inside the courtroom on the ground floor of the Quezon City Jail Annex (QCJA) building around 9 a.m.

Motion to quash

Lawyer Eddie Lidasan sought postponement of the arraignment of three of the accused, saying he had just arrived from Cotabato City and had yet to read the pending motions involving his clients.

But Assistant Chief State Prosecutor Richard Anthony Fadullon objected, saying it would delay the proceedings.

"The victims' families who are here also came all the way from Mindanao," Fadullon said, prompting relatives inside the packed courtroom.

However, the judge granted Lidasan's motion and gave the prosecutors five days to comment on his motion to quash.

Lawyer Harry Roque, who was representing the families of 13 of the 30 slain journalists, asked Reyes to allow Nena Santos to speak in open court in behalf of the victims' kin regarding their request to defer the hearing until a new president is sworn in on July 1.

Appeal to speak nixed

Roque said the Santos only wanted to express their sentiments over the decision of acting Justice Secretary Alberto Agra to exonerate Zaldy and Akmad Ampatuan from their complicity in the massacre.

But Reyes told Roque that any request made by the private prosecutors must have the consent of state prosecutors.

After consulting with the other state lawyers, Fadullon opposed Roque's appeal.

"There are also families of other victims of the massacre who might not share their views," Fadullon maintained.

Agra is not DOJ

State prosecutor Juan Pedro Navera said the government lawyers were inclined to dissent with Roque's manifestation.

"We may not endorse it. There are other victims in the case who wish to have the right to a speedy trial," Navera argued.

The lawyer of the Mangudadatu clan also expressed her opposition to Roque's motion.

Nena Santos, who represents 23 of the 57 victims, said moving the trial after June 30 would unfavorably affect the fight for justice.

"Agra is not the DOJ," Santos later told reporters. "We still put our full trust and confidence in the government handling the case."

Justice 'impossible'

But Roque said it was "impossible" to secure justice under the Arroyo administration. "What's the use of having witnesses if we lose the entire case because of the government?" he said.

The accused looked relaxed during the trial. Some were smiling while talking with their escorts. One policeman flashed a peace sign to reporters.

Fifty-seven people, including at least 30 media workers, were killed when about 100 armed men attacked their convoy on their way to file nominations for the Mangudadatu clan that is contesting the Ampatuans' political rule in the province.

'NOT GUILTY' Maguindanao massacre suspects composed of nine police officers and two militia members are escorted by policemen to a court hearing at Camp Bagong Diwa in Taguig City. They pleaded not guilty to 57 counts of murder.

Getting Stronger Through the Years

In modestly celebrating its 98th founding anniversary with the theme "LTO getting stronger through the years" the Agency aptly echoes its resolve to strengthen its commitment towards a rationalized and environment friendly land transportation services, effective implementation / enforcement of the transportation laws, and efficient collection of revenues.

The LTO family is, indeed, committed to carry on our responsibility to the public and our stakeholders with strong and unqualified resolve. No stone should be left unturned and all quarters and all hands should be empowered to achieve 100% automation of all LTO sites, interconnectivity with all concerned agencies and stakeholders and, ultimately, an ISO 9001-2000 Certification for the entire Agency before it celebrates its 100th founding anniversary.

Indubitably, accolades are due to the Officers and employees of the sixty one (61) LTO field offices that are now in the list of world class organizations implementing ISO Quality Management System. There should be no slacking, hence, in extending supportive and coordinative efforts towards the continuous implementation of the Integrity Development Action Plan, in coordination with the PAGC, Office of the Ombudsman, and Development Academy of the Philippines, to pursue the momentum towards moral and operational strengthening of the Agency.

In the name of public service, Happy Anniversary and Congratulations to all!

PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER

Political court

INTERVIEWED BY THE JUDICIAL AND BAR COUNCIL for the position of chief justice, Supreme Court Justice Arturo Brion spoke the unmentionable truth. The next chief justice, he said, will suffer from the public perception of the high court as politically partisan. The task ahead, therefore, is daunting: to prevent political color from creeping into the Court's decisions.

EDITORIAL

As if to reinforce Brion's point, the Supreme Court soon after that interview issued its final ruling on the issue of whether President Macapagal-Arroyo can appoint the next chief justice, even during the period of the constitutionally mandated ban on appointments. If there is any decision of the present Supreme Court that stamps it, for all to see, as an Arroyo Court, it is De Castro vs. JBC. For the Court to reiterate its position then, by the same 9-person majority, and with a peremptory "final word" attached to the second decision, is to willingly wrap around itself the mantle of Arroyo's partisan defenders.

Justice Conchita Carpio Morales again dissented; Justices Antonio Eduardo Nachura and Presbitero Velasco again maintained that the case was premature. Chief Justice Puno and senior justices Antonio Carpio and Renato Corona again inhibited themselves. (And again, we repeat something we said earlier, a point of view shared by ... like Joaquin Bernas, SJ: Given such a precedent-setting case of historic import, posterity would have benefited if these three most senior justices had taken part in, rather than abstained from, the deliberations.)

Justice Lucas Bersamin, the ponente in both decisions, denied that politics had entered into the picture. "The members of the Court vote on the sole basis of their conscience and the merits of the issues. Any claim to the contrary proceeds from malice and condescension," he wrote. He then offered the argument so often used in the Philippines by bureaucrats and corporate spokesmen, when confronted by the specter of accident: "Walang ... ." Of course, he used much more rational language. "Neither the outgoing President nor the present members of the Court had arranged the current situation to happen."

He also offered the argument from duty: "We cannot now ... the imperative duty under the Constitution to fill up the vacancies created by such inexorable retirements within 90 days from their occurrence. Her official duty she must comply with. So must we, who are tasked by the Constitution to settle the controversy."

The problem is, the 9-person majority chose to "settle the controversy" through the most unsettling, the most controversial route possible. It chose to upend existing jurisprudence, which had already settled the issue of so-called "midnight appointments" conclusively and with the active participation of four current or future chief justices. It chose to privilege the view of one member of the Constitutional Commission, Florenz Regalado, over the clear language of the Commission itself and the views of the proponent of the provision on midnight appointments, Hilario Davide, as well as other commissioners. It chose to see a distinction where none existed, claiming that the ban did not and could not apply either to the judiciary in its entirety (the view of most in the majority) or to the Supreme Court alone (the view of the rest of the majority, including Brion). Not least, it chose to invent an emergency where none existed, an urgency that in truth undermines the standing of each of the justices; it chose to see the need for a new chief justice, immediately after the retirement of the incumbent, as if, to borrow Carpio Morales' biting phrase from her first dissenting opinion, "the Court cannot function without a sitting chief justice." But in fact, Carpio-Morales argued, "The competence, probity and independence of the Court en banc, or those of the Court's Division to which the chief justice belongs, have never depended on whether the member voting as chief justice is merely an acting chief justice or a duly appointed one."

The ruling, therefore, is the best (or the worst) example of the political color that Brion wants the Court to avoid. Instead of settling the controversy, it only guarantees more of it.

Thaksin men put up barricades, prepare for Bangkok bloodshed

BANGKOK—THAILAND'S "Red Shirts" have entrenched themselves in Bangkok's glittering commercial heart, establishing a staggeringly large and elaborate protest base for their anti-government fight.

SUPPORTERS of ousted Prime Minister Thaksin carry tires for a makeshift barricade on Silom Road in the financial district of central Bangkok. Thailand's "Red Shirt" protesters fortified their rally base with homemade barricades, saying they were braced for a "brutal" crackdown. AFP

Let's do 10 Million Acts to save Mother Earth!

Join the 10 Million Movement!
Register at: www.10mm.ph or text GREEN REG firstname/middle initial/lastname/10mm and send to 5777 or email earthday.phils@gmail.com

SO WHAT'S MY CARBON FOOTPRINT?

Cut out this checklist and see if you are doing your part to save Mother Earth.

☐ 1. I do not throw waste into bodies of water like rivers and lakes.
☐ 2. I plant indigenous plants such as narra, antipolo, etc.
☐ 3. My baby (if I had one), uses cloth diapers instead of disposable diapers.
☐ 4. I recycle and reuse non-biodegrable wastes.
☐ 5. I join Earth Hour. I switch off my lights.
☐ 6. I switched from incandescent bulbs to compact fluorescent lamps (CFLs).
☐ 7. I do not litter.
☐ 8. I use reusable grocery and shopping bags.
☐ 9. I go up or down one floor using the stairs instead of the elevator or escalator.
☐ 10. I ride mass transit systems like the MRT, LRT, buses and jeepneys.
☐ 11. I buy organic products like organic food, soap and detergents.
☐ 12. I turn off the air-conditioner one hour before the end of office hours.
☐ 13. I use a glass while brushing. I don't let the water run when brushing my teeth.
☐ 14. I compost my biodegradable wastes.
☐ 15. I turn off my lights and unplug my appliances when not in use.
☐ 16. I turn my car engine off instead of idling.
☐ 17. I do not burn my wastes.
☐ 18. I take my used car batteries and empty ink cartridges to accredited recyclers.
☐ 19. I do not buy dynamited fish and endangered animals like turtles, manta rays, wild birds, etc.
☐ 20. I conserve water by using pail and dipper when bathing.
☐ 21. I don't overcharge my cellphones.
☐ 22. I fix leaky faucets and check them regularly.
☐ 23. I minimize the use of disposable cutleries and plates during parties.
☐ 24. I recycle used water from washing clothes. I use this to flush the toilet and to clean the floors.
☐ 25. I do not ride smoke-belching vehicles and report them to LTO at tel. no. 0021741111.
☐ 26. I make rags out of old towels and t-shirts.
☐ 27. I collect rainwater, and use it to wash clothes, flush the toilets, and water houseplants and the garden.
☐ 28. I drive carefully. I avoid rapid acceleration since this can burn as much as 50% more fuel.
☐ 29. I reuse scrap papers. I use clean paper for external communications only.
☐ 30. I ride a bike or walk when going short distances.

If you scored: 0-10 points - Needs more effort, but the stars are clear on the horizon.
11-20 points - Almost there, just needs a few more daily Green habits.
21-30 points - Congratulations! You have done your part to help save Mother Earth!

CLOSE TO 1000 WAYS
EXPLORE AN EXCITING AND COLORFUL WORLD
at SM City North Edsa
SM City North Edsa celebrates Earth Day with the rest of the world by opening our doors for everything about this beautiful planet of ours. With everything from learning about how to take care of our flora and fauna to exploring other cultures, SM City North Edsa will cover them all. You will even see live and stuffed animals and be surprised at facts that you did not know about these precious creatures. This earth month, let's all celebrate and love our planet, we only have one.
OPEN YOUR EYES TO OTHER CULTURES
As we know, our planet is composed of many mixed cultures. This April, a Bugandan tribal dance will be held to show the diversity of the planet that we live in. If you don't know where Buganda is, you better come and watch to know more about our neighbors in other parts of the globe.
PAINT YOUR LOVE FOR THE EARTH
We only have one planet and the only way to show our gratitude is to show our love. Murals will be put up that show how we can love Mother Earth in our own little ways. Photo booths will also be set-up during this event.
SENSORIUM

AboitizPower believes in consumers key role in sustainable and cleaner energy solutions

Consumers play a vital role in helping corporates develop technology and systems that will allow for sustainable and cleaner energy solutions.

This is the observation made by AboitizPower Corp. president and CEO Erramon Aboitiz in his speech delivered before the recent Renewable Energy Summit at Hotel Sofitel in Manila.

AboitizPower currently represents one of the largest private renewable energy producers in the Philippines. Its renewable energy portfolio includes geothermal and hydroelectric power plants located across the country. It is currently operating two geothermal power plants: the Tiwi plant in Albay and the Makban facility located at the Laguna-Batangas border.

AboitizPower's hydroelectric generation assets, meanwhile, include the Baton plant in Nueva Ecija, the Magat plant in Isabela, and the Ambuklao plant in Benguet. The latter two are in partnership with Norwegian company SN Power.

This generation portfolio has replaced generation that would have amounted to 2.8 million tons of carbon dioxide annually.

Recently, AboitizPower furthered its support for clean and renewable energy through the construction of its Sibulan Power Park, a greenfield project that will utilize water running on Sibulan River to power two hydroelectric facilities. The first of these two plants is already operational and is generating 26 MW. The second plant is already under construction and is expected to generate 16.5 MW when finished.

In his speech, Aboitiz said that the customer is key to creating a market that encourages clean energy, its efficient use and its conservation.

"For customers to do this, they have to be aware of what's happening, what is the alternative, and how they can participate," Aboitiz said.

One of the ways with which AboitizPower has helped in achieving this aim of consumer engagement is through Cleanergy, its brand of clean and renewable energy that communicates its vision to offer an energy solution that leaves a lighter impact on Earth's climate and its limited resources and promote the usage of clean and renewable energy from sources that are sustainable and cleaner compared to traditional energy sources.

"We launched Cleanergy in 2001 and its mission then still holds true now–to make Cleanergy available to every Filipino," Aboitiz said.

Through Cleanergy, AboitizPower envisages a future wherein business and people power their activities with cleaner and renewable power; where companies that have chosen Cleanergy to receive recognition for making a responsible choice; and where customers can be part of a community of like-minded people who champion sustainable energy use, from businesses to households.

Aboitiz stressed that customer is key to creating a market that encourages clean energy.

It is also a future that sees Cleanergy contributing to sustainability projects that promote the development of new sources of clean and renewable power and participate in more activities that encourage the use of efficient energy.

"We believe that available, reliable and affordable electricity is the lifeblood of our country, fueling both the economy and individual opportunity. We in AboitizPower, therefore, consider it our responsibility to provide reliable and ample power supply when needed, to ensure that the supply of electricity is provided at a reasonable cost, and lastly to accomplish the first two duties with the least possible effect on our environment," Aboitiz said, adding that "the future of our children is our choice, not our fate."

AboitizPower is the holding company for the Aboitiz Group's investments in power generation, distribution, retail and power services. It is a major producer of renewable energy in the country with several hydroelectric and geothermal assets in its generation portfolio. The non-renewable portfolio consists of plants throughout the country. The distribution utilities it owns and operates are located in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao. (www.aboitizpower.com)

AboitizPower aims to make Cleanergy available to every Filipino.

AboitizPower launched Cleanergy in 2001 but its mission is still the same to make Cleanergy available to every Filipino.

TBWA\SMP STRIKES 5 OUT OF 6 GOLDS

When TBWA\Santiago Mangada Puno touched down on the white shores of Boracay, the agency representatives had only one thing in mind - they must bring home a gold lightning trophy. By the end of the 2010 Kidlat Awards night, the agency successfully reached their golden goal. Out of six gold medals given out, TBWA\SMP took home a total of five - the most golds won by any agency. Four golds were awarded to the Cannes-winning series of exotic liquid flora for Boysen Paints. One each for Best in Print, Best Press Campaign, Best Outdoor Campaign, and Best Print Art Direction. One gold medal for Best Film Direction went to the Absolut "Hugs" TV spot that was generated for an American and European market. Adding to the impressive golden haul, TBWA\SMP also took home six silvers and two bronzes.
